

When the root of the tree has been gnawed away by aggressive caretakers—

When the root of the tree of government has been gnawed away by aggressive politicians who separate ethics and morals from freedom and choices—

then there is a very strong possibility that the entire tree—

there is a very strong possibility that the whole political framework and structure—

By their fruit.....

will be malformed, sickly and incapable of producing healthy and lasting fruit!

will become malformed, sickly and incapable of producing healthy and lasting policy.

This could have been avoided if the caretakers had only combined reason with ingenuity, rather than separating them.

This could have been avoided if the politicians had only listened to their consciences—because a rightly operating conscience will always produce good rather than sickly results.

you shall know.....